LPGA major championship is heading to Sahalee Country Club this summer

Professional golf in the Pacific Northwest is already good - and now with the addition of an LPGA major championship good has become even better.

The KPMG Women's PGA Championship is set for June 7-12 at Sahalee Country Club in Sammamish, Wash. and will feature the best the LPGA Tour has to offer.

This is the second annual KPMG Women's PGA Championship, the tournament started last year with an agreement between the PGA of America and the LPGA Tour.

The LPGA Tour's top players including Stacy Lewis, Christy Kerr, Michelle Wie and Lexi Thompson will all be part of the field. Inbee Park won the tournament last year and has won the tournament three straight years and will be looking for a fourth in a row.

Sahalee is no stranger when it comes to hosting major championships, The course has hosted the PGA Championship, the United States Senior Open, the NEC Invitational and has been a host course for some of the top amateur events in the country.
